Introduction and Purpose of the Needs Analysis

Communities across Nebraska are facing immense challenges; housing, childcare, and declining population to name a few. Rising to meet these seemingly impossible tasks are the local community leaders who care deeply for preserving and bettering their communities. It is this commitment to growth that has led the Village of Elm Creek to go through the Community Alignment process, facilitated by the Nebraska Association of School Boards Board Leadership Team. The board and community administrator recognize the need to come together as a community to begin addressing the mutual challenges that threaten the longevity of our communities and the livelihoods of our families.

The Village of Elm Creek has chosen to provide the opportunity for each individual to become active players in designing the future of their community. Through a comprehensive engagement of stakeholders, the creation of community values and aspirations, and a collaborative planning effort, Elm Creek and NASB will begin laying out the roadmap for the growth of the community.

What is the Needs Analysis?

The Community Needs Analysis is the first step in making positive change happen in Elm Creek. This document reflects the results of a community wide survey engagement, in-person facilitated discussions, and the use of relevant extant data to provide a clear picture of the state of the community. By combining these sources of information, not only will the highest needs and priorities be identified, but the dreams of a better future exist within the community members who participate. It is the responsibility of the Board and Community Administrator to address these needs and priorities, and to make the community vision come to life.

Within this document are the coded results of qualitative and quantitative assessments of various aspects of the community. These are broken down into 8 core elements of a well-functioning community. These results are provided along with relevant extant data to these 8 core elements to identify the current needs of the community. From this information the Village of Elm Creek and the NASB Board Leadership Team will identify and build a comprehensive plan to support community development over the next 3-5 years.

Core Elements

The Needs Analysis and corresponding framework and Strategic Plan are separated into eight core elements. These elements describe the categories of structures, resources, and dynamics of a well-functioning community. Data and identified needs may fall into one or more of these elements. Through careful planning, the use of quality data, and a commitment to continuous improvement, growth in these eight core elements can lead to lasting, positive change for our communities. The core elements are as follows:

1. Community Culture and Climate

The first core element represents the feel and attitudes of the community. How connected are community members? Does the community share a sense of collective self-efficacy? Are the interpersonal dynamics of the community conducive to growth? The conglomeration of shared beliefs among the community forms the basis for this core element.

2. Healthcare and Wellness

Everything to do with excellent physical, mental, and emotional wellness can fall into the second core element. Access to adequate medical care, counseling, or other services is an important part of creating community-wide wellness. The quality and affordability of these is also a major factor in improving quality of life for every individual.

3. Education

While playing a major role, K-12 education is not the only piece of this core element. Adequate early childhood education supports the youngest community members as they enter the K-12 world while higher education institutions and other adult education options can expand and grow the capacity of a community.

4. Community Structures and Land Use

A thriving community must have the physical structures in place to shelter citizens and provide spaces for play, business, and public use. Dedicating space in the community for certain activities through planning and zoning is essential to planning for a community's future. In conjunction, having adequate, appropriate, and affordable housing is crucial to maintaining and attracting community members. Also, the appearance of these structures can directly impact the feel and culture.

5. Business and Economic Development

Every community must have a bustling business community to support its growth. Not only do businesses provide job opportunities, but they form the foundation of the tax base and provide goods and services to the entire community. The generation of resources through business and economic development is essential to providing a community with the resources necessary for growth.

6. Infrastructure and Communication

No community is complete without the essential services such as gas and energy to power homes, clean water, and waste management. Services like internet connectivity, cell service, and street lighting are all necessary to make our communities safe and connected to the rest of the world. Communication with all citizens is necessary for community announcements, engagement, and safety.

7. Social and Recreation

The opportunity for citizens to create, play, compete, and socialize is necessary to build connections across the community. Providing these opportunities also brings joy and satisfaction to the lives of community members. Community sports leagues, arts and theater, or social clubs are great opportunities for community members to engage meaningfully with others.

8. Governance, Law, and Policy

The final core element is an effective system of government. This includes the creation and enforcement of laws, policies, ordinances, and codes that support the growth of the community. Civic engagement by all community members, not just elected or appointed community officials is vital for a truly democratic process in any community. Finally, the ability of the elected officials to govern is an important area to ensure a community actively makes steps towards growth.

Background and Demographics

Community History

The village of Elm Creek was founded in 1866 as Union Pacific built the railroad through Buffalo County. Named for the red elm trees growing near the creek, Elm Creek was incorporated in 1906. That same year, a fire destroyed many of the buildings in town, forcing residents to rebuild in stone. This also prompted the building of a waterworks system and the organization of a volunteer fire department. Like many towns along the Platte River, flooding heavily impacted the town in the 1930's and 1940's. Elm Creek is nestled in between three larger communities, Lexington, Holdrege, and Kearney, providing many "big city" job and education opportunities while still providing the safety and community of a small town. The local school district boasts a wonderful football and track facility, and just recently made significant improvements to their elementary building.

Demographics

The following information was obtained from the US Census Bureau based on the American Community Survey 5-year estimates.

In 2022, Elm Creek was estimated to have a population of 1,176. The following are breakdowns of age and race for this estimate. The median age was 29.2 while the two most common racial groups were White (89.4%) and Hispanic/Latino (7.7%).

The largest categories in the age breakdown are 25-34, and 35-44. This, along with the large number of individuals in the 0-14 age groups suggests a significant number of young families live in Elm Creek. Additionally, according to the American Community Survey 5-year estimates, 16.4% of women aged 15-50 gave birth in the past year. This number is over double the rates for both Buffalo County and Nebraska. This certainly has implications for housing, childcare, and educational needs, but is a positive sign of future growth in the community.

Economics

The median household income in Elm Creek in 2022 was $68,500. The chart below provides details on the breakdown of household incomes across the community. The chart also provides estimates for how this data is broken down by family households and nonfamily households. The median incomes for both groups are estimated to be $77,708 and $31,429 respectively. The difference in distributions between family and nonfamily households could be due to their being multiple earners in family households. This is further illustrated in the distribution of married couple families. The median average for these families is estimated to be $88,750. While the opportunity for having multiple earners clearly increases a household's earning potential, the median earnings for families and married couple families are well over double and just under triple that of non-family households, respectively. The number of family vs. nonfamily households is 274 vs 156, suggesting a strong majority of family households.

Data Collection and Analysis Process

Online Engagement

The primary method of data collection performed was through online surveys administered through the online survey system, Qualtrics XM®. These surveys were provided to the community administrator for distribution throughout the community via a QR code and a general URL link. Methods of distribution included online newsletters, social media posts, the community website, posted notices at community areas, and targeted distribution of the QR code or URL to community groups. Paper copies were also available at the community office.

In addition, the facilitator was able to use a connection with the school district made prior to the engagement of the community to distribute the survey via email to school district stakeholders with verbal permission from the superintendent. The surveys completed provided data on a number of areas including housing, childcare, business and economic development, community appearance, civic services, and more. Online survey engagement was completed in October and November of 2023 and totaled 197 responses. A breakdown of ages of survey respondents is shown below:

In-Person Engagement

An additional component of the engagement process was a pair of in-person, facilitated focus group discussions. The first of these discussions was a SWOT (Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, and Threats) Analysis of the community. Participants identified positive and negative aspects of the internal community as well as external possibilities and challenges for the community. See the SWOT Analysis section for the results of this meeting.

The second facilitated in-person engagement was a discussion and creation of community values. The group began by identifying aspects of the ideal community member. The next step was to identify community aspirations. These aspirations serve not only as content to form community values from, but also show specific areas of need for community members that the board and community administrator can use as guidance for community development initiatives. The identified characteristics of an ideal community member and community aspirations were then put into categories that would become the core values of the community. The results of this engagement are available in the Community Visioning/Core Values section.

Processing the Data

After the collection of data via online surveys, the data is put through a descriptive qualitative analysis to firstly remove any identifiable characteristics and protect the anonymity of participants, and secondly to identify emergent themes from the qualitative data. All of this data is reported along with the reports from the engagement meetings. The NASB facilitator then uses all qualitative and quantitative data to provide relevant community data for the core elements available in the next section. Combined with data from the ACS Community Survey 5-year estimates and any other current planning initiatives, the following Needs Analysis will provide a clear picture of the current state of the community.

Health Care and Wellness

According to the American Community Survey 5-year estimates, there is currently 9.4% of the population in Elm Creek living with some form of disability. This is slightly lower than the state average of 12.6%. Additionally, there is currently 9.1% of the population living without some form of health insurance. This is slightly higher than the state average of 6.7%. The data below is an assessment of the access and quality of healthcare in the community:

Housing

The chart below indicates that 83% of respondents to the survey owned homes while 10% rented, and 7% were not financially responsible for owning/renting a home. Most other publicly available information about housing including the American Community Survey indicate that about 70% of homes in Elm Creek are owned while 30% are rented.

Also indicated in the chart above was that 11% of respondents' residences were not currently meeting their housing needs. The majority of these were said to be too small or in need of significant repairs. The US Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) uses the American Community Survey to create their Comprehensive Housing Affordability Strategy data reports. The charts below show the estimated percentage of households with one of the 4 main housing issues (incomplete kitchen facilities, incomplete plumbing, more than 1 person per room, and greater than 30% cost burden) as well as a breakdown of these percentages for homeowners vs renters.

Because one of the four main housing issues is cost burden, renters are more likely to be labeled in the data above as having housing issues. Below is a distribution of homeowners' and renters' economic statuses based on the same data used to create the charts above. It is important to understand the economic conditions of homeownership as it is a major barrier for many aspiring homeowners, especially young families who help to build thriving communities.

Another element of housing is the transition of housing. The continued residence of homes with multiple bedrooms by one individual or couple can be detrimental to a community's ability to grow. Survey Respondents were asked the following questions about their potential move or housing transition:

In the next 5 years, will you be looking to change residences?

Business and Leadership Development

The charts below indicate an employment rate of 88%. The American Community Survey 5-year estimate indicates that this number is closer to 72%. Acquiring more responses to survey engagement could verify this discrepancy. The mean travel time to work for citizens in Elm Creek was 22.2 minutes. Consistent with the second chart, this would suggest a majority of the community works outside of their resident community. The “Bedroom Community” phenomenon is common among communities near larger cities or metro and micropolitan areas. The largest industries of employment in Elm Creek were Education, Healthcare, and Agriculture. This is echoed across many rural communities and demonstrates the vital connection between school district, community, rural health organizations and medical care, and other essential industries.

Governance, Law, and Policy

The community survey completed as a part of the needs assessment did not contain items about effective governance, policy, or laws. The response rates to the survey serve as the first point of data for this core element. The survey received a total of 197 responses. Of the 1,176 total estimated citizens in Elm Creek, 346 of those residents are below the age of 15 according to the demographic chart on page 6. If we remove the youngest age groups, as they may not have a robust understanding of many functional parts of the community, we are left with 830 potential survey responses. 197 responses out of 830 is 23.7% of citizens participating in the survey. It is the goal of a truly collaborative and democratic governance process to engage as many citizens as possible to ensure the viewpoints of all are represented in decision making. It should be the goal of the Board and Community Administrator to implement strategies and infrastructure to build civic engagement across the community.

Additionally, an assessment of policy to search for a few essential components of effective governance was conducted. The presence of these policies correlates with governance practice that fosters transparency and goodwill with the public, while maintaining effective accountability for elected and appointed officials. The chart below notes the presence of these recommended policies and notes to ensure they are enacted and written purposefully.

Policy	Location in Policies	Notes
Open Meetings and Minutes Archival	Chapter 30.01-30.10	Ensure compliance with this policy to promote effective communication with the public through the board meeting
Policy Review Cycle	Not Present	All policies should be reviewed on a 1 to 3-year cycle
Complaint Process	Not Present	A formal process for a patron complaint should be present to access the Council/Board.
Grievance Process Policy	Not Present	A formal process of complaint should be present for municipal employees and services. (see ECPS 4013 for guidance)
Budget Process	Chapter 33	-
Administrative Regulations and Role	Chapter 31.022	Review to align appointed position's descriptions in policy with their job descriptions
Administrator Evaluation Policy	Not Present	Yearly evaluation is taking place, but should be completed by the entire board and should lead to goals set for the administrator
Board Code of Conduct	Not Present	A standard of performance for board members uphold should be present to promote civic involvement and high performance
Board Evaluation Policy	Not Present	Yearly evaluation on objective standards promotes a positive culture and effective governance
